PARK CITY, Jan. 28 .- An attempt to start gambling in this city Friday night has inaugurated a lively fight between the city and county officials.

has inaugurated a lively fight between the city and county officials.

The roulette wheel had been spinning but a short time when Sheriff John Coffey and deputies placed Clark, a saloon-keeper: John Rinely, alleged owner of the game, and one player under arrest. The three were taken before Precinct Justice of the Feace Henry Crossman, when each of them was placed under $100 bonds to appear for trial next Monday afternoon. Clark refused to furnish bonds and was held.

City Attorney White issued complaints charging the accused with the same offense that the county attorney charged them with. They appeared before City Justice R. H. Waters this afternoon, pleaded guilty and a fine of $10 in each case was imposed. Sentence was suspended in the case against the player. This action of the city kills the prosecution of the county, it is claimed. The city officials maintain that the reason for their action was to stop the county officials from interfering with city affairs.

Justice of the Peace Henry Crossman was arrested Saturday afternoon on a complaint sworn to by Marshal Evans, charging him with gambling. He has taken until Tuesday afternoon to plead. Crossman is out on his own recognizance. He declares that his arrest is a place of spite work to prevent him from imposing a fine on Clark. He further states that he has sufficient evidence to swear to a complaint against a judge, charging him with gambling, and that he is now getting evidence against city officials.
